Question 2.

As a reporter you have visited a number of hospitals in your city. Write a newspaper report entitled 'City' Hospitals', based on the following points: [20]

Buildings and infrastructure – maintenance of the hospitals – quality of services – Doctors – nursing staff – waiting period for treatment – emergency' facilities – other facilities available – medical equipment – overall opinion.

Answer:

City Hospitals

November 25, Nagpur

Directed by the Health Department I visited as many as ten leading hospitals of the city' last week. Most of the hospitals have double/triple storey buildings with the most modern infra-structure. But the maintenance of the hospitals is not satisfactory. The number of patients in each hospital is more than manageable. As a result of it out-door patients have to wait for hours to see the doctor. The quality of service is very good indeed. The doctors are highly qualified and awakened to their duty. What pinches the patients is the waiting period for treatment. Sometimes the patient is having acute pain or due to extreme old age is not able to wait. The only provision for such cases is that they should pay double fee for seeing the . doctor out of turn. While the rich grab such an opportunity, the poor have to sit in the waiting room for hours. Emergency facilities are available in every hospital. Ambulance service is available to transport patients from any part of the city to the desired place. Almost all the hospitals are fully equipped with modern equipment. The only thing which pinches the patients sometimes is the rudeness of the nurses and the overworked staff. Patients need sympathy sometimes more than even the treatment.

Question 4.

Read the passage given below and answer the questions (a), (b) and (c) that follow:

(1) My father and I left the hall and made our way out to walk across to headquarters.

There were street lights round the square, but underfoot the cobblestoned ground was dark and lumpy. My father tripped on the uneven surface and went down on one knee, trying not to fall entirely.

(2) At exactly the same moment there was a loud bang and a sharp zinging sound and a scmnch of glass breaking.

(3) I bent over my father and saw that his eyes were stretched wide and his mouth grim with pain.

(4) "Run!" he said. "Run for cover. For God's sake. Ben! That was a gunshot!"

(5) We were halfway across the square, easy immobile targets. He stmggled to get 10 to his feet and told me again to run: and for once I disobeyed him.

(6) "Stay down," I told him.

(7) "You don't understand..." His voice was anguished.

(8) "Are you bleeding?"

(9) "What? I don't think so. I twisted my ankle." 25

(10) People ran out of the hotel, drawn by the bang that re-echoed around the square. There was confusion and people saying, "What happened, what happened?" and hands stretching down to my father to help him up. When he was well surrounded he finally took my arm. Putting his left foot down caused him much discomfort. 20

(11) "That noise... ." a woman said.

(12) Heads nodded. "It sounded like... Was it... a gun?"

(13) "But where? There's no one here with a gun."

(14) Everyone looked round, but it was far too late to see the rifle, let alone the person shooting. My father put his arm round my shoulders for support, and 25 indicated that we should set off.

(15) We walked in a procession to the headquarters and my father called the police.

(16) I went to the open door, looking across the square to the hotel.

(17) I remembered the zing of the bullet. If the bullet had been aimed at my father, and if he'd stumbled at the exact second that the trigger was squeezed, and if 30 the bullet had smashed some glass so that I heard the tinkle, then why was every pane of the window in the headquarters intact ?

(18) I told myself that the whole thing had been a coincidence and turned to go back inside, and saw for an instant a flash of light on broken glass down on the ground. 35

(19) It was a window of the shop next door that had been hit.

(20) Zing. Ricochet. Smash. The straight line could have been deflected by the curve of a cobblestone.

(21) The police arrived at headquarters, and it was nearly two o'clock when I finally closed and bolted the doors and switched off the lights. 40

(22) My father moved himself into one of the single beds in the bedroom. I lay on the second, not at all sleepy.

(23) My father said, "Ben, why didn't you run?"

(24) I answered. "I didn't want you to get shot."

(25) "So you stood in the way..." 45

(26) After a while, I said, "I'd say it was a .22 rifle with a high-velocity bullet. Hitting you in the body, it quite likely won't kill you. You need to hit the head or the neck to be lethal. All I did was shield your head."

(27) There was a silence. Then he said, "I'd forgotten you could shoot."

(28) "I was in the school team. We were taught by one of the country's best 50 marksmen." I smiled in the dark. "You paid for it, you know."
